Biographical / Historical

Joseph Schull started at the Ford Foundation in 1991 as an assistant program officer in the International Affairs program. By 1993, he was promoted to deputy director of the International Affairs program. In 1996, Ford Foundation program areas were restructured, and he became deputy director of the Governance and Civil Society program within the Peace and Social Justice division. The Governance and Civil Society program's overarching goals were to improve governmental performance and accountability, find new approaches to implement public policies, and enhance the role of civic organizations in promoting democratic values. Schull worked to fund new initiatives in Russia and Eastern Europe. Schull left the Ford Foundation for Warburg Pincus in 1998.
