Biographical / Historical

Douglas P. Murray attended Yale University where he received his BA in Behavioral Science in 1958 and his MA in Southeast Asian Studies in 1961. He went on to receive his PhD in International Development Education from Stanford University, with his dissertation on Chinese education in Singapore.

Throughout his career he has held several positions related to Asia and China: Director of the US-China Relations Program at Stanford University, 1975-1981, Vice President of the East-West Center in Honolulu, 1981-1984, Executive Secretary of the Committee on International Relations Studies with the People's Republic of China, and President of China Institute in America, 1986-1988.

He first traveled to Asia in 1958 to teach English at New Asia College, Hong Kong, through the Yale-China Association, and has taught at New Zealand's Victoria University and in Singapore while serving as Representative of The Asia Foundation.

He joined the National Committee on United States-China Relations first as Program Director and Vice President, 1975-1981, and has served as a member of its Board and Executive Committee. He was President of NCUSCR in 1997.
