Biographical / Historical

The Ford Foundation was chartered by Henry and Edsel Ford in 1936 "to receive and administer funds for scientific, educational and charitable purposes, all for the public welfare", and initially served the Ford family's charitable interests in the Detroit area. Following the deaths of Edsel Ford (1943) and Henry Ford (1947), the Foundation was propelled to the forefront of philanthropy as the largest American foundation in terms of both endowment and yearly expenditures, and with an international scope to its major program areas.

In 1950, the Ford Foundation's Trustees planned out five areas of activity. One area, Program Area III, revolved around "activities designed to advance the economic well-being of people everywhere and to improve economic institutions for the better realization of democratic goals." To comply with the Trustee's recommendations, the Foundation created an advisory group composed of leading economists. They published their report in 1954 with recommendations to focus on four major problem areas in the field of economics: 1.) understanding the effects of private interests of businesses, government agencies, labor unions, and other organizations on public welfare; 2.) maintaining economic growth and stability; 3.) improving private and public policy; 4.) improving international economic relations. The economists proposed the Foundation focus on funding research activities, development of personnel in the field, and educating the public on economic issues.

In the 1950s and '60s, the Ford Foundation followed the advisory group's recommendations by funding conferences, nonprofits, and universities in the studies of natural resources, manpower, economic development, international economic relations, and the improvement of business administration and performance. The Foundation also funded faculty and student fellowships in economic studies, research centers at universities, and provided grants to improve business education at the undergraduate and graduate level.

Conditions Governing Access

Open for research. Brittle or damaged items are available at the discretion of RAC.

Conditions Governing Use

RAC users must abide by all applicable provisions of United States copyright law. Reproduction/duplication of archival items is routinely provided in accordance with "fair use". If the RAC does not hold copyright for an archival collection, or items within a collection, it is the users responsibility to contact the copyright holder, or make a fair effort to do so, prior to publication.

Immediate Source of Acquisition

Ford Foundation archive was deposited at the RAC in 2011. Ford Foundation records, correspondence, reports, program files, and officers' papers were transferred to and accessioned by the RAC beginning in 2011. This material was transferred to the RAC in 2019 and was ingested by the RAC as part of Accession 2019:012 (boxes 30255, 30256, 30358); 2019:028 (box 30254).

Processing Information

Standard Processing by Katie Martin, October 2019. Originally the files in this collection were part of two larger accessions called "Program Strategy records." The material was unrelated to the majority of these accessions and was separated to create this discrete collection.
