Biographical / Historical

The Ford Foundation was chartered by Henry and Edsel Ford in 1936 "to receive and administer funds for scientific, educational and charitable purposes, all for the public welfare", and initially served the Ford family's charitable interests in the Detroit area. Following the deaths of Edsel Ford (1943) and Henry Ford (1947), the Foundation was propelled to the forefront of philanthropy as the largest American foundation in terms of both endowment and yearly expenditures, and with an international scope to its major program areas. During the Foundation's first twenty years its major programs were in international economic development, primary and higher education, educational and public broadcasting, behavioral sciences, civil liberties, urban development, fine arts and the humanities. The Ford Foundation also partnered with the Rockefeller Foundation in supporting agricultural development in South America, Africa, and Southeast Asia. Since the 1970s, the Foundation has also pioneered programs in women's rights, energy policy, micro-financing in under-developed countries, establishing human rights groups, and improving international HIV/AIDS education.

Biographical / Historical

Natalia Kanem is a medical doctor who has worked in the fields of public health, reproductive health and sexuality, peace and international cooperation, and human rights and social justice. Her career encompasses positions in academia, philanthropy, and the United Nations. She held various posts at the Ford Foundation between 1992 and 2005 and is the current Executive Director of the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA).

While at the Ford Foundation, Kanem's position changed from Program Officer for Women's Reproductive Health and Sexuality at the Lagos, Nigeria Office, to Representative for West Africa, to Senior Director of Management Services, to her final position as Deputy Vice President of the Peace and Social Justice Program (PSJ).

Kanem received a BA in history and science from Harvard University, an MD from Columbia University, and a Master's degree in public health with specializations in epidemiology and preventative medicine from the University of Washington. She joined the UNFPA in 2014 as the Country Representative for Tanzania, and then in 2016, she became Deputy Executive Director in charge of Programmes. She was appointed UNFPA Executive Director in 2017.
