Biographical/Historical note

The Commonwealth Fund was established in 1918 with an endowment of $10 million from Mrs. Stephen V. Harkness for "benevolent, religious, educational and like purposes." The early grants supported a variety of programs while generally promoting welfare, especially child welfare. Several grants were made in the field of medical research, but the Board of Directors decided in 1920 that this field was already sufficiently supported by other philanthropic organizations.

Despite this decision, by the mid-1920s the chief interest of the Fund had become public health, including mental hygiene, community health, rural hospitals, medical research, and medical education. Other grant areas included war relief, educational and legal research, child welfare, and international medical fellowships.

Scope and Contents note

During a visit to the United States in 1925, Mrs. St. Loe Strachey observed the work of the Philadelphia Child Guidance Clinic, one of the CF's demonstration clinics. Impressed by the activities of the Clinic, Mrs. Strachey inquired whether the CF might undertake a similar program in England. After her return to England she interested a number of individuals in her proposal and chaired a committee designed to implement her ideas. At the invitation of this committee, Mildred C. Scoville visited England in June 1926. The Fund then invited twelve key individuals to observe American child guidance techniques, and later enabled five English social workers to come to New York for training in psychiatric social work at the Institute for Child Guidance and the New York School of Social Work.

The Child Guidance Council (CGC) was organized in 1927 in London and included representatives of various groups concerned with the mental and physical health of children. The Council assumed responsibility for a program which included the establishment of a child guidance clinic in London, the training of psychiatric social workers, and the carrying on of general educational work in the mental health field.

The London Child Guidance Clinic opened in 1929, its staff having been trained in the United States during 1928 and early 1929. Arrangements were made by the CGC for a training course for psychiatric social workers at the London School of Economics, with a number of scholarships being provided by the CF. The CGC also offered fellowships in psychiatry and psychology. In 1930 the London clinic became an independent body with its own administrative and medical board, and the CGC emphasized other educational work and assistance in the development of clinics throughout England and in the improvement of standards of service. The London School of Economics utilized the London clinic for much of its field training. The CF supplied the major financial support of the entire project until 1931-1932 and thereafter withdrew gradually.

World War II forced the closure of the London clinic in 1939 and the mental health program was disrupted throughout the war years. After the war, however, advances in child guidance work rapidly developed. The Child Guidance Council, the National Council for Mental Hygiene, the Central Association for Mental Welfare, and the Mental Health Emergency Committee merged into the National Association for Mental Health, an organization financed entirely from British sources. The London School of Economics underwrote the costs of the mental health training courses, and the clinic resumed operation with funds from various sources, including a grant from the British Ministry of Health.
