Biographical/Historical note

Clarence M. Connelly (1916- ), physicist and Dean of Graduate Studies, was a member of The Rockefeller University faculty from 1954 until his retirement on December 31, 1984.

Connelly received his A.B. from Cornell University in 1938 and continued graduate studies there until 1942. From 1942-1946 he was a staff member with the Radiation Lab of M.I.T. where he worked on radar development. He joined Deltev Bronk's research group in 1946 at the Johnson Research Foundation of the University of Pennsylvania as an American Cancer Society pre doctoral fellow, where, in 1949, he received his Ph. D in biophysics. Connelly's work in biophysics focused on nerve cell function and activity.

From 1949-1954 Connelly was an assistant professor at John's Hopkins University.

While at The Rockefeller University, he become Associate Dean of Graduate Students In 1962 and assumed the responsibilities of full Dean in 1980. In this capacity he worked with members of the faculty and the V. P. for Academic Programs in a effort to locate and attract prospective students.
