Biographical / Historical

The Ford Foundation was chartered by Henry and Edsel Ford in 1936 "to receive and administer funds for scientific, educational and charitable purposes, all for the public welfare", and initially served the Ford family's charitable interests in the Detroit area. Following the deaths of Edsel Ford (1943) and Henry Ford (1947), the Foundation was propelled to the forefront of philanthropy as the largest American foundation in terms of both endowment and yearly expenditures, and with an international scope to its major program areas.

During the Foundation's first twenty years its major programs were in international economic development, primary and higher education, educational and public broadcasting, behavioral sciences, civil liberties, urban development, fine arts and the humanities. The Ford Foundation also partnered with the Rockefeller Foundation in supporting agricultural development in South America, Africa, and Southeast Asia. Since the 1970s, the Foundation has also pioneered programs in women's rights, energy policy, micro-financing in under-developed countries, establishing human rights groups, and improving international HIV/AIDS education.

Scope and Contents

Ford Foundation President Franklin Thomas testifies before the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs on the subject of Federal Government support for urban aid. Also testifying are executives from other philanthropic organizations like the Rockefeller Foundation and the Mott Foundation. Senator Donald Riegle of Michigan chairs the Senate Committee. Thomas' statement begins around the 1:32:55 time mark. He discusses a framework for including the experiences and opinions of the people living in cities to address the problems many American urban areas face.

Testimony was delivered on September 17, 1992, and the recording aired on C-SPAN 2 on September 20, 1992 at 1:25 p.m.

The recording of the hearing ends around the 2:35:00 time mark.
