Biographical/Historical note

The Trilateral Commission is a discussion group focused mainly on policy studies which was founded in 1973 by David Rockefeller and several other prominent private sector leaders of North America, Europe and Japan to broaden the understanding of international issues and their transnational impact.

In many ways the origins of the Trilateral Commission stem from the reorganization and reconstruction of the political and economic order following the resolution of World War II. The United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference held July 1-22, 1944 at the Washington Hotel in Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, commonly known as the Bretton Woods Conference, brought together delegates from all the allied nations to stabilize and regulate the international monetary and financial order. The Bretton Woods accords established the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and the International Monetary Fund (IMF). A period of significant economic growth followed particularly in the regions of Western Europe and Japan where the redevelopment of infrastructure and the expansion of trade exports increased their relative economic power.

The exchange rate management system established at Bretton Woods, with the U.S. dollar as its benchmark, remained in place until 1971 when U.S. President Richard M. Nixon abolished the direct convertibility of the U.S. dollar to gold and in effect abandoned U.S. participation in the Bretton Woods system. In this period of rapid change, economic and financial instability and growing nationalist tendencies discouraging the open market system established at Bretton Woods, the Trilateral Commission was conceptualized and formulated.

In March 1972, speaking before Chase Bank investment forums in Montreal, London, Brussels and Paris, David Rockefeller called for “an international commission for peace and prosperity composed of private citizens drawn from the NATO countries and Japan to examine such vital fields as international trade and investment; environmental problems; control of crime and drugs; population control; and assistance to developing nations.”<sup>1</sup> Rockefeller considered Japan as an essential member of the international community and viewed a commission as a mechanism for including the Japanese in the international dialogue.

While on an airplane headed to the Bilderberg group meeting in Belgium in April 1972, David Rockefeller spoke with a like-minded colleague Zbigniew Brzezinski, Director of the Research Institute on Communist Affairs, Columbia University. Two years earlier Brzezinski had published Between Two Ages: America's Role in the Technotronic Era in which he advocated that “a community of developed nations must eventually be formed if the world is to respond effectively to the increasingly serious crisis that in different ways now threatens both the advanced world and the Third World.”<sup>2</sup> To address transnational issues and problems “an effort must be made to forge a community of the developed nations that would embrace the Atlantic States, the more advanced European communist states and Japan. These nations need not – and for a very long time could not – form a homogenous community resembling EEC.”<sup>3</sup> Brzezinski's thesis called for reshaping the framework of international affairs. “Movement toward such a community will in all probability require two broad and overlapping phases. The first of these would involve the forging of community links among the United States, Western Europe and Japan, as well as other more advanced countries...the second phase would include the extension of these links to more advanced communist countries.”<sup>4</sup> Brzezinski envisioned forming a trilateral body, “a high-level consultative council for global cooperation, regularly bringing together the heads of governments of the developed world to discuss their common political security, educational-scientific and economic-technological problems, as well as to deal with their moral obligations toward the developing nations.”<sup>5</sup> Finally Brzezinski argued that a trilateral body intent on enabling international discourse and the sharing of information regarding issues of commonality is lacking within the existing structure of international organizations, stating that “a council of this sort, perhaps initially linking only the United States, Japan and Western Europe, and thus bringing together the political leaders of states sharing certain common aspirations and problems of modernity, would be more effective in developing common programs than is the United Nations, whose efficiency is unavoidably limited by the Cold War and northsouth divisions”<sup>6</sup>

The Bilderberg group promotes understanding and discourse between North American and Western European countries. At the April 1972 meeting David Rockefeller, as he had done previously, urged the Bilderberg Executive Committee to take a trilateral approach and invite the participation of Japan. When his recommendation for trilateralism was again rejected by Bilderberg, Rockefeller continued to pursue the idea, investigating its application through further consultations with Brzezinski, George S. Franklin, a college roommate of Rockefeller's at Harvard who served as Executive Director of the Council on Foreign Relations from 1953-1971, and interested colleagues in Europe and Japan. David Rockefeller's consultations culminated with a July 23-24, 1972 meeting at Pocantico Hills, NY attended by C. Fred Bersten, Robert Bowie, Zbigniew Brzezinski, McGeorge Bundy, Karl Carstens, Guido Colonna di Paliano, Francois Duchene, Rene Folk, George S. Franklin, Max Kohnstamm, Bayless Manning, Kiichi Miyazawa, Kinhide Mushakoji, Saburo Okita, Henry Owen, David Rockefeller and Tadashi Yamamoto; in which the participants enthusiastically agreed to take steps to establish the Trilateral Commission.<sup>7</sup>

Shortly thereafter in the Fall of 1972 and early 1973, the respective areas designated regional chairman, Zbigniew Brzezinski was selected as the Commission's Director, and financial support was obtained from several sources including but not limited to the Kettering Foundation and Ford Foundation, to supplement the initial seed monies provided by David Rockefeller.

The Commission was originally established for a 3 year period. It has since been renewed for successive triennia, most recently for a 13th triennium to be completed in 2012.

Biographical/Historical note

Administrative Structure of the Trilateral Commission

Organizing Chairman (Founder) – David Rockefeller

Regional Chairmen – Three (One from each trilateral region)

Director – In the first triennia, the Commission had a central Director, Zbigniew Brzezinski, responsible for overseeing day to day operations, focusing particularly on policy studies.

Coordinator – In 1977, the Commission chose to decentralize by creating the position of Coordinator rather than continuing with a Director. The Coordinator, George Franklin, was chosen by the Executive Committee. The Coordinator continued to oversee Commission operations, but the European and Japanese offices were considerably strengthened.

Executive Committee – comprised of Regional Chairmen, Deputy Chairmen and other members from all three regions. The Executive Committee is responsible for the policy recommendations of the Commission.

In 2000, the Commission accomplished one of the goals Brzezinski had envisioned by expanding its membership to include representatives from other advanced democratic nations – restructuring the Japanese membership to encompass that of the Pacific Asian region including but not limited to: Australia, Malaysia, New Zealand, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand. Commission leaders have also actively sought to include individuals from communist and other non-trilateral countries in the discourse, through the planning for, and/or holding of meetings in non-trilateral areas such as Moscow (1980), Beijing (1981) and Mexico City (1984, 1990). Such meetings were not always successfully held as initially proposed, but the Commission continues to engage opportunities to enhance the discussion through expanded participation and the inclusion of differing perspectives.

Scope and Contents note

The objective of the Trilateral Commission is to foster discussion and cooperation among the core democratic industrialized areas of the world. David Rockefeller defined the Commission's primary focus as bringing "the best brains in the world to bear on the problems of the future."<sup>8</sup>

In the 1970's the dominance of the United States in the world community and economy was diminishing and there was a sense that a new more equitable paradigm of international affairs would be needed to address global challenges. The Commission acts as a platform for greater cooperation between the member regions as well as an opportunity to enhance discussion and understanding of the problems, concerns and interests common to all three areas.

Upon its founding in 1973, the Commission's immediate goals were to introduce Japan into the international community; welcome Japanese participation in trilateral discourse; and bring together prominent non-governmental leaders, representing all three geographical regions and a variety of professional fields to address the key common problems facing the three regions.

Specific aims of the Commission include:

1. To facilitate better communication. Communication in turn helps to alleviate potential misunderstandings as well as to develop greater understanding of the complex issues confronting the three regions and the world.
2. To propose policies. Policy recommendations are mainly in the area of foreign policy including economic relations, political and security concerns, and the relationship of trilateral countries to the developing world and/or to communist nations.

3. To foster understanding and support of the Commission's recommendations among governmental and private sector non-member leaders in all three trilateral regions.

Files for the regional commissions in Europe and Japan are not represented in the collection.

Physical Characteristics and Technical Requirements note

Much of the collection currently remains housed in original folders. The adhesive on the original labeling has lost its usefulness over time, and in many cases the labels are no longer affixed to the folders. RAC staff suggests that researchers using the Trilateral Commission records consult the inventory for full folder titles, which appear in abbreviated form on the folders themselves.

Related Materials

Documentation of various Commission meetings is also available in the Francois Sauzey files in Series 3, the Officers Files (Series 5), and the Early Office Files in Series 6.

Scope and Contents

1. Preliminary and Early Meetings, 1972-1975 The preliminary and early meeting records document several preparatory meetings in the Commission's formation. Files are also included from North American regional meetings which preceded the international Executive Committee meetings in 1973 and 1974. The pattern of meetings in the early years was for the international Executive Committee meeting to be preceded by regional meetings of the entire membership in that given region.

2. Principal International Meetings The principal international meeting records provide documentation of the Executive Committee meetings, Plenary meetings, and the preparation for several meetings planned to be held outside the Trilateral area including Moscow early 1980 (a planned meeting with members from all three regions - cancelled after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan); Beijing 1981 (a meeting held in 1981 with members from all three areas, followed by travel in China); and Mexico City 1984 (cancelled due to scheduling when it became clear that President de la Madrid would be out of the country at the time). A conference was later held in Mexico City prior to the 1990 Plenary meeting in Washington, D.C.

Since the inception of the Commission, the location of the annual meetings has rotated among the three regions.

The first three international meetings of the Commission --- 1. Tokyo October 1973; 2. Brussels June 1974; and 3. Washington, D.C. December 1974 --- were all executive committee meetings. The first international plenary meeting was held in Tokyo/Kyoto in May 1975. The next major meeting was an executive committee meeting held in Paris in December 1975. Then the May 1976 meeting in Ottawa was a plenary meeting. All subsequent principal international meetings have been plenary meetings.

From 1976-1979 the plenary meetings took place approximately every 9 months. Since 1979, the plenary meetings have been conducted on an annual basis. The substance of the principal international meetings is collected in issues of Trialogue, (which draws together presentations from each meeting) and through the project reports (which are discussed in draft form at the meetings). Meeting participation and programs can be tracked in the program/bio books.

3. Other Meetings The records of other meetings include that of: Chairmen's Meetings, 1974-1998 (typically held just prior to the annual plenary meeting, although in some years they were held directly after the plenary meeting); Three Region Executive Committee (typically met over breakfast on one day of the plenary meeting.); North American Executive Committee and Trustees (typically met each summer and have held some special meetings);

Meetings with David Rockefeller as Chairman; North American Events; North American Regional Dinners, 1986-1991 and European Regional Meetings. Documentation of various Commission meetings is also available in the Francois Sauzey files in Series 3, the Officers Files (Series 5), and the Early Office Files in Series 6.

Task Force Reports/Projects, 1973-2001

Physical Description: 60.6 Cubic Feet Boxes 95=209.

Scope and Contents

Apart from the gathering of the membership at meetings, the other major activity of the Trilateral Commission involves writing and distributing policy studies which are undertaken primarily through the creation, development and distribution of Task Force or Project reports, also known as the Triangle Papers.

Task Force or Project Reports typically involved a team of authors from the three regions working together for a year or more to create a report. The report was often discussed, usually in draft form, at an annual meeting. Reports have usually been published and circulated widely once they are completed.

There are several exceptions to this general rule: 1. Three reports had single authors: the 1985 Nishihara Report; the 1990 Israel-Pakistan FitzGerald paper; and the 1992 Gyohten paper. 2. Seven are signed individual essays, sometimes with a joint conclusion. 3. Several reports were completed with the help of outside/unaffiliated institutes such as the Atlantic Institute.

In 1991-1992 three working groups were created – 1. Common Security Issues – which led to Report 43 : Keeping the Peace in the Post-Cold War Era: Strengthening Multilateral Peacekeeping (1993). 2. Global Issues (Migration and Refugees) – which led to Report 44: International Migration Challenges in a New Era (1993). 3. Economic Interdependence – which served as the framework for Gyohten's Report 42: Regionalism in a Converging World (1992)

Individual papers prepared in the context of these working groups were published in the 1992 Working Group Papers.

The task force reports/projects permit intensive consideration of an issue, or a set of issues, and allow the participation of experts, including non-members, possibly from nontrilateral countries as authors, consultants or contributors. The reports often serve to provide context and perspective rather than recommending a set of specific policy directives.

The topics are chosen by the Commission leadership (chairmen, deputy chairmen, and directors) with the advice of the Executive Committee and others.

Topics include: 1. Economic Relations (monetary, fiscal, trade and investment policy); 2. Security (arms control, nuclear proliferation); 3. Energy issues (and the political implications of energy policies); 4. Relations among trilateral countries; 5. Relations with developing countries; 6. Relations with communist countries; 7. International institutions and political consultations.

The task force reports/projects are reported to the Trilateral Commission, not of the Trilateral Commission. This distinction is an important one because attempting to reach a consensus among trilateral countries is often extremely difficult or impossible to achieve. The Commission in effect is not coming to a consensus on the issues being discussed; instead several appropriate individuals are chosen to investigate a topic and their findings are then reported to the Commission.

A unique characteristic of the trilateral reporting process involves giving experts a forum within which to discuss issues, and to potentially seek multilateral long term solutions and common ground, without the pressures of national interests, which so often dominate bilateral negotiations between countries.

Arrangement

This series is arranged numerically by Report Number (Task Force Reports 1-55). Accompanying files extend through Report 52 (1998).

Scope and Contents

The Task Force files contained in the collection have accompanying "front matter" which chronicles the process by which each report was developed, often including various draft chapters and reports, correspondence between authors and/or authors meeting records and meetings with other consultants or experts. Accompanying files may also include publication arrangements, and documentation of press conferences and/or publicity.

Box 209 contains two copies of most published reports. One copy is available of Report #37, #38, #39, #42 and #53. A final published version of Report #52 is not available in the archival collection. There is no individual copy of Report #9, but #9 is available in the combined volumes published by the NYU Press.

Four draft reports were not completed for publication – Report #20: Major Payment Imbalances and International Financial Stability (1979); Labor Market Problems and Policies in Modern Trilateral Societies (no assigned #, 1980); Report #34: Science and Technology in Trilateral Relations: Competition and Cooperation (1987); and Report #47: Revitalizing Trilateral Democracies.

Most reports were translated into Japanese. Many were translated into German. Some were translated into Spanish, French, Russian, and/or Italian. Translations are sporadically available within the body of the collection.

Publications, 1973-2000

Physical Description: 17.4 Cubic Feet Boxes 210-239.

Scope and Contents

The Publications series contains documentation of the Commission's principal publication Dialogue, as well as the Commission's Annual Reports, 1974-1991, and a limited selection of publication distribution files.

Dialogue serves as the Commission's bulletin or newsletter including documentation of the Annual Meeting, other reports, speeches, and relevant policy discussions. Dialogue began as a mimeographed bulletin circulated to members and friends. It became a printed affair in 1975. With Francois Sauzey as its editor it grew to a substantial magazine with one issue each year covering the annual meeting of the Commission and other issues each covering specific topics. But its subscriber base was not large enough to sustain an expanded publication schedule. In mid-1984, after Sauzey left the staff, Dialogue shifted to producing only one issue each year covering the annual plenary meeting. There were two special issues in the 1990s – a compilation of the Working Group papers in 1992, and the Commission's 25th Anniversary in 1998 (with Sauzey returning as its editor).

Arrangement

The Dialogue records are loosely arranged by Issue Number, 1-54 (1973-2000).

Scope and Contents

Some issues of Dialogue have related files, correspondence and work product within the collection. Many issues are represented only by a copy of the final publication. Final publications are available in Boxes 220-223.

Archival material related to Issue 4 is in Box 340 only. No final publication copy of Issue 4 is available.

Scope and Contents

Francois Sauzey Files – Sauzey was a member of the Commission's New York staff from mid-1976 through mid-1984. His primary responsibility was to act as editor of Dialogue. Sauzey also handled much of the Commission's public relations. In addition to Sauzey's Dialogue and public relations records, his files also contain meeting records and correspondence from his time with the Commission.

Membership, 1978-1980s

Physical Description: 1 Cubic Feet Boxes 240-241.

Scope and Contents

When the Trilateral Commission was initially established, the intention had been to have an equal number of members from each of the three regions. Initial membership consisted of approximately 190 members. 1. North America (United States and Canada); 2. Europe (Belgium, Denmark, France, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, U.K., West Germany); 3. Japan.

Around 1980, membership ceilings were imposed for the three regions. These ceilings have been periodically raised as new countries are added.

Membership ceilings as of 2011 are: North America – 120 (87 US, 20 Canada, 13 Mexico). Europe – 160 (20 members each for Germany, France, Italy, U.K.)(14 Spain), (The remaining national quotas range from 4 to 9). Pacific Asian – 100+ In 2000, the Japanese group of 85 members was expanded and restructured. The new configuration is 57 Japan, 15 Korea, 8 Australia & New Zealand, 16 from 5 ASEAN Countries (Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand). By 2008, the Pacific Asian group was comprised of more than 100 members. Individuals from Taiwan, Hong Kong and the People's Republic of China have also participated.

Membership is by invitation. For the North American group, invitations are decided upon by the Executive Committee, on the basis of recommendations by members and staff. Members are generally corporate, political, educational and non-profit leaders including prominent businessmen, journalists, academicians, non-profit executives, union and labor leaders and politicians. New members are chosen on a national basis. Membership procedures differ slightly depending on the national region. Members who accept positions in the executive branch of their government must forfeit their Commission membership.

The Trilateral Commission archives does not contain much documentation of the Commission's membership. Most North American membership files remain at the North American Office in Washington, D.C. Membership files for other regions are at their respective offices.

Financial records, 1972-1997

Physical Description: 9.5 Cubic Feet Boxes 358-377.

Scope and Contents

Much of the Commission's day-to-day financial material was discarded prior to shipment of the archival records to the Rockefeller Archive Center, and is therefore not contained in the archives of the Trilateral Commission (North America). Financial records documenting activities of the past five years are maintained in the Washington D.C. office.

In the Commission's first triennium (July 1973-June 1976) all program expenses were covered out of the North American office in New York. In the second triennium, a system was put in place - termed the "balancing of accounts” - for program expenses to be shared among the three areas and for a coordination contribution to be made by Europe and Japan to North America. Archival holdings are available documenting the balancing of accounts, 1976-1988.

Funding for Commission operations was obtained from corporations and private foundations. Early funding sources documented in the archival collection include, but are not limited to: David Rockefeller, the Kettering Foundation, the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, the Lilly Endowment and the Ford Foundation.

The collection also contains a selection of financial statements and reports for the period 1973-1997.
