Biographical / Historical

In November 1973, Nelson A. Rockefeller worked with former Delaware Governor Russell W. Peterson to establish the Commission on Critical Choices for Americans, and served as its chairman until December 1974. In December 1973, Rockefeller resigned as Governor of New York, in part to devote his efforts towards the Commission.

The Commission was a private study project on national and international policy similar to that of the Special Studies Project, directed by Henry Kissinger, and funded by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund while Nelson Rockefeller was President of the Fund from 1956-1960.

The Commission on Critical Choices for Americans was made up of a nationally representative, bipartisan group of 42 prominent Americans drawn from far-ranging fields of interest who served on a voluntary basis. Members included the majority and minority leaders of both houses of Congress.

The Commission gathered information to investigate and understand many of the challenges facing America, and published monographs, essays, studies, and research papers which identified the “critical choices” to be made and recommended possible solutions.

In August 1974, nine months after establishing the Commission, Nelson A. Rockefeller was nominated to serve as Vice President of the United States, and he was officially inaugurated as such on December 19, 1974.

Rockefeller’s lack of direct involvement had a profound impact on the work and effectiveness of the Commission. Each of the panels had planned to refine and expand the background studies, but instead the Commission chose to publish the background studies themselves.
