Conferences. In 1945 Dr. MacInnes, dissatisfied with results of conferences attended by large numbers, suggested to Dr. Jewett and Dr. Bronk that the National Academy of Sciences sponsor and support specialized 3-day conferences limited to no more than 25 participants actively at work in the particular subject area.

They were held primarily at Ram's Head Inn on Shelter Island and Arden House, though the first was held at The Rockefeller Institute.

War contract work, 1941-1945

Scope and Contents

In 1940 Dr. Vannevar Bush was authorized to form the National Defense Research Committee which in 1941 was absorbed by the Office of Scientific Research and Development. Under the direction of Dr. Bush, Dr. Conant of Harvard was in charge of the research done on chemistry and explosives. Problems were farmed out on contract to universities and other existing installations. Two such contracts, OEMsr-130 and OEMsr-350 were arranged with The Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research with Duncan MacInnes as the senior investigator. On the OEMsr-130 contract much of the laboratory work was under the supervision of Donald Belcher.
