Biographical / Historical

Michael Teitelbaum is a demographer, former foundation executive, and educator. He worked at the Ford Foundation during two different stints of time as a Program Officer in the Population Program.

In between his two stints at the Ford Foundation, Teitelbaum worked as a lecturer on demography at Oxford University. He joined the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation in 1983 as a Program Director after his second time at the Ford Foundation and later became Vice President of the organization. Shortly before leaving the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, Teitelbaum became a Wertheim Fellow at Harvard Law School in 2010.

Teitelbaum earned a B.A. in sociology and biology from Reed College and a D.Phil in demography from Oxford University.
