Biographical/Historical note

Kenneth C. Smithburn was born October 19, 1904, in Noblesville, Indiana. He received the B.S. (1926) and the M.D. (1928) degrees from Indiana University.

From 1930-1938, Smithburn was a staff member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York (later known as The Rockefeller University). In 1939, he joined the Yellow Fever Research Institute, Entebbe, Uganda, becoming director in 1946, a post he held until 1948. In 1953 he organized and directed a unit for research in Johannesburg, South Africa, on arthropod-borne viruses under the joint sponsorship of the Rockefeller Foundation, the South African Institute for Medical Research, and the Poliomyelitis Research Foundation. He remained there until 1959 when he retired.

Smithburn was appointed to the Hemorrhagic Fever Commission (1952-1954), and the Virus and Rickettsial Disease Commission (1953). He was a member of the following organizations: American Association of Immunologists, American Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene, and the Royal Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene. He was a fellow of the New York Academy of Sciences and an honorary member of the British Medical Association.

Smithburn was a prolific writer publishing both individually and jointly over ninety monographs. Subjects covered in these publications include: meningococcal disease, meningitis, anemias, experimental tuberculosis, epidemiology of yellow fever, neurotropic viruses isolated in Africa, immunological relationships between viruses, and antiviral immunity surveys.

Kenneth C. Smithburn died in Indianapolis, Indiana, on November 23, 1973.

Collection Inventory

Subject Files, 1922-1973

Scope and Contents note

Series 1, Subject Files, contains Smithburn's professional correspondence and experimental data arranged in the order in which they were received. Thus, within these files, both unique and routine materials are intermingled. Information about Smithburn's appointment in 1938 to the Yellow Fever Unit in Entebbe is found in correspondence with the Rockefeller Foundation in folder 60. Correspondence with colleagues Alec Haddow (1943-1964), Stuart Kitchen (1946-1964), and Paul Maurice Weinbren (1955-1959) contain ongoing discussions of experiments and scientific findings in Entebbe following his departure in 1948. Correspondence with George Strode in 1947, located in folder 67, reveals Smithburn's concern about the impending transfer of the Entebbe Unit to London control and his desire to return to the States. A brief history of the Entebbe Unit, written by Smithburn, is located in folder 54.

Also present in Series 1 are reports, memoranda and correspondence (folders 12, 14-16) relating to work done on behalf of the Army Epidemiological Board with Hemorrhagic Fever in Japan and Korea from 1952 to 1953. There is extensive correspondence with Robert Kokernot (1955-1973), primarily personal in nature, with early letters describing laboratory experiments in Johannesburg, South Africa. Smithburn's correspondence with the Rockefeller Foundation is of a routine nature and concerns reimbursements for supplies, salary and retirement, housing, insurance, and other personal matters.

Scientific data and experiment files contain information on a variety of viruses, their carriers, and protocols used. A 1953 letter between Smithburn and John Craig in folder 28, discusses linkages between Japanese B Encephalitis and the arthropod-borne viruses. An epidemic similar in nature to Chikungunya disease is described in a report located in folder 4. There are nine letters from Albert B. Sabin relating to experiments with the dengue and sandfly fever viruses.

Arrangement note

In Series 1, the files are arranged alphabetically by name and subject.
