Title:	Ford Foundation records, Office of the Vice President of Administration, Office Files of Arthur D. Trottenberg
ID:	FA669
Date [inclusive]:	1968-1979
Physical Description:	29.36 Cubic Feet
Language of the Material:	English
Abstract:	The office files of Arthur D. Trottenberg document the varied responsibilities Trottenberg fulfilled in his role as Vice President of Administration for the Ford Foundation from 1968 to 1979. The files were transferred to the Foundation's Archives in increments spanning the years 1969-1991, and they were formally accessioned all together in 2004. Series have been reworked, but Trottenberg's original filing order (primarily chronological) has been retained. Budget reports and some papers from the Board of Trustees, including the Board's Executive Committee and its Finance Committee, were removed from the collection. These documents are noted in Appendices C and D, and can be found in their respective collections in the Archives. Information on specific program-related investments, as noted in Appendix E, has also been removed from the collection and can be located in the Closed Grant File Room. The Foundation used the services of a number of legal consultants. Written reports from some of these consultants can be found within the collection. However, a number of legal consultants were only evidenced within the collection by the bills they sent to the Foundation, which have been removed from the collection. For a full list of legal consultants, see Appendix F. Access to folders 454-458 in box 46 is restricted; the researcher should consult the archivist before viewing the materials in these folders. The position of Vice President of Administration in the 1970s differed from its present-day counterpart in that it encompassed a wider variety of responsibilities. The former position included the present-day's responsibilities – facilities, information services, purchasing – as well as overseeing the work of the Comptroller's Office, Manpower Services (human resources), and Program-Related Investments. Thus, Trottenberg's files provide the researcher with a broad view of the Foundation's activities during his tenure.

Biographical / Historical

Arthur D. Trottenberg was Vice President of Administration for the Ford Foundation from July 1968 until his retirement in November 1979.

Trottenberg was born December 30, 1917. After serving as a Captain for the United States Air Force (1942-1946), he received his A.B. degree in 1948 from Harvard University. Upon graduating, Trottenberg remained at Harvard until 1968, filling the following positions:

- Manager, Operating Services • Assistant to Vice President • Vice President, Radcliffe College • Assistant Dean, Faculty of Arts and Sciences

In 1979, Trottenberg retired from the Foundation to accept an appointment as the Associate Dean of the faculty of Arts and Sciences at Harvard University.

Throughout his career, Trottenberg was a consultant to the United States Office of Education, as well as to a number of colleges, universities, and foundations. He also served as the director and secretary of the Salzburg Seminar in American Studies until his position at the Foundation required him to resign from those posts in 1968.

Trottenberg authored a number of publications including, A Vision of Paris-Atget and Proust (Macmillan 1963) and various articles on education, architecture, planning, and photography for several journals and magazines.

Arthur D. Trottenberg died in Cambridge, MA on June 20, 2003.

Scope and Contents

The office files of Arthur D. Trottenberg consist of 32 linear feet (64 archival boxes, plus one flat box) of primarily memoranda, correspondence, reports, and policy papers. Policy papers refer to both drafts of policy statements and pages from policy manuals. Other materials found in the collection include telegrams, speeches/statements, press releases, newspaper articles, audits and financial reviews, questionnaires, charts, handwritten notes, photographs, maps, and blueprints. The records document Trottenberg's tenure as the Vice President of Administration at the Ford Foundation, 1968-1979. The files include a limited number of records from before Trottenberg's term with the Foundation. These earlier documents are mostly records passed on to Trottenberg from his predecessor, Verne S. Atwater.

The files cover a wide range of topics that is reflective of Trottenberg's various responsibilities as the Vice President of Administration of the Foundation. Trottenberg oversaw a number of departments – Comptroller's Office, Manpower Services (name changed to Office of Personnel Services in 1973), Logistical Services, and Program-Related Investments – causing his files to serve as a useful cross-section of the Foundation's activities in the 1970s.

Collection Inventory

Administration and Operations, 1964-1980 (bulk)

Scope and Contents

The series consists mainly of memoranda, but also includes correspondence, telegrams, reports, policy papers, speeches/statements, press releases, and newspaper articles.

Arrangement

Series I, Administration and Operations, is housed in ten archival boxes, and is divided into two subseries: Administration and Operations. "Operations" refers to the Foundation's program areas. Within these subseries, the files are arranged hierarchically by division and office. Items within each folder are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Administration and Operations The Administration and Operations series contains materials from the Foundation's divisions, offices, and staff members. The series consists of various types of material such as reports and policy papers. However, the primary material found in this series is memoranda between Trottenberg and the staff members, demonstrating Trottenberg's role within various areas of the Foundation's work. The series is most abundant in Trottenberg's interaction with McGeorge Bundy, Roger Kennedy, and Howard Dressner, as well as the Office of the Comptroller, and Program-Related Investments. While not as profuse, the series also contains some documentation of the work of others, such as a few folders dedicated to the Division of Education and Research and its program officers. The series covers a wide range of topics spanning the Foundation's activities. Some of the most prominent topics include affirmative action, management costs, tax reporting, program-related investments, grant payments, review of program priorities, self-evaluation and task forces, record-keeping and records management, and benefit plans. This series is best used in conjunction with other series.

Memoranda and Correspondence, 1968-1979

Scope and Contents

The Memoranda subseries includes Trottenberg's chronological files and other assorted staff memoranda (mostly sent from Trottenberg to the staff, though there are some memoranda that were sent from other staff member to Trottenberg). The Correspondence subseries includes miscellaneous correspondence with people outside of the Foundation. Some correspondence deals with grant proposals. The series consists of primarily memoranda and correspondence, but also includes some telegrams, policy papers, and reports.

Arrangement

Series II, Memoranda and Correspondence, is housed in seven archival boxes, and is divided into two subseries: Memoranda and Correspondence.

Scope and Contents

Memoranda and Correspondence The Memoranda and Correspondence series provides a rough outline of Trottenberg's influence during his post at the Foundation. Even more so than the previous series, the documents in this series touch on topics that span all of the other series in this collection, such as affirmative action, computer usage, library services, access to Foundation records, travel policy, salary policy, medical plan, energy conservation, fellowships, grant payment procedures, leasing office space, and real estate inquiries. Since the topics tend to be mixed together, the files in this series may not be the most useful on their own. They may be better used in conjunction with the other series as a way of filling in holes in the data.

Financial, 1958-1980 (bulk)

Scope and Contents

The General subseries consists of documents on a number of topics, such as accounting, management cost actions, and financial reports. The Budget subseries contains budget materials ranging from general management costs to costs of particular offices. The Budget subseries documents budget planning only. The series consists of memoranda, correspondence, reports, charts, and notes.

Arrangement

Series III, Financial, is housed in seven archival boxes, and is divided into two subseries: General and Budget. Items within each folder are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Financial The Financial series contains various materials, such as a number of financial reports, both internal and outsourced to consultants. Other topics include, accounting procedures, balance of payments, the General Reserve, and management costs. However, the series is most complete in its documentation of budget planning. Trottenberg was a large presence in the process of forming the annual budgets for all of the Foundation's divisions and offices. His role in budget planning is particularly notable in the early half of the 1970s when the Foundation underwent a period of major retrenchment which will be discussed in more depth later.

Personnel, 1958-1980 (bulk)

Scope and Contents

The General subseries consists of documents on a number of topics, such as staff recruitment and orientation, leaves of absence, housing assistance, and travel policy. The Compensation subseries contains information on salary policy and benefits (mainly the thrift and retirement plans). The series consists of memoranda, correspondence, reports, policy papers, charts, and notes.

Arrangement

Series IV, Personnel, is housed in eight archival boxes, and is divided into two subseries: General and Compensation. Items within each folder are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Personnel The Personnel series covers a wide range of topics, such as the internationalization of staff, staff recruitment and orientation, leaves of absence, housing assistance, travel policy, and field office memos. However, the most abundant information that this series contains is that of compensation packages, ranging from salary policies to benefits. Whereas salary policy is primarily documented in the form of office memoranda, much of the information on benefits is in the form of consultant reports by Towers, Perrin, Forster, and Crosby (TPF&C). Establishing salary policies during the early 1970s was a difficult task due to the rapidly rising costs of living in New York combined with the Foundation's need to cut management costs during its period of severe retrenchment. During Trottenberg's time, employee benefit packages were affected by the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, which will be discussed in more depth later.

Information Systems and Services, 1967-1983 (bulk)

Scope and Contents

The General subseries consists of general consultant studies on the Foundation's information systems and services. The Library subseries and the Archives and Records Management subseries are fairly limited in the information on these units. The Computer and Electronic Data Processing subseries, on the other hand, is a more useful subseries as it more thoroughly documents computer usage within the Foundation, particularly in its early stages. The series consists of memoranda, correspondence, reports, policy papers, reports, and notes.

Arrangement

Series V, Information Systems and Services, is housed in four archival boxes, and is divided into four subseries: General, Library, Archives and Records Management, and Computer and Electronic Data Processing. Items within each folder are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Information Systems and Services The Information Systems and Services series addresses the full gamut of information areas of the Foundation. The Library subseries includes limited information about library usage, donation of books, and future development of the library and library services. The Archives and Records Management subseries contains information on record-keeping and records management in the form of correspondence control and bureaucratic reporting, as well as information on an oral history project documenting policies, program objectives, and organization of the Foundation. The subseries also documents the beginnings of the Foundation's archives, primarily in the form of establishing policies and procedures on the access of archival records. The series proves most useful in the fullness of its Computer and Electronic Data Processing subseries. Information technology is no doubt an integral part of today's workplace, but its presence was not always assumed. The Computer and Electronic Data Processing subseries documents the Foundation's early efforts at incorporating use of computer systems into the Foundation's workload in order to speed up processes that could easily be automated. Initially (as early as 1965), the Foundation looked into the prospect of using computers primarily for computer-based accounting. However, as years passed, the Foundation expanded its interest in computer usage, as with its 1974 proposal for the Grants Retrieval and Information Display System (GRIDS), providing wider-spread access of data on grants throughout the Foundation.

Overseas, 1966-1979 (bulk)

Scope and Contents

The General subseries consists of documents on a number of topics, including personnel policies, compensation, and taxes for overseas offices, as well as information on specific field offices. The series consists of memoranda, telegrams, reports, policy papers, audits, newspaper articles, and notes.

Arrangement

Series VI, Overseas, is housed in four archival boxes, and is divided into four subseries: General, Staff Trips, Audits, and Conferences. Items within each folder are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Overseas The Overseas series covers a number of topics, ranging from compensation and taxes for overseas staff members, to information about field offices such as financial audits. The series also includes staff members' overseas trip reports. For instance, Trottenberg traveled all over the globe to such locales as, London, Paris, Latin American, Egypt, Lebanon, and Nigeria, visiting field offices and attending committee meetings. The series also documents preparation and planning for a number of conferences that were held overseas. Some such conferences include the International Division Conferences in 1973 and 1975, the Athens Press Conference in 1973, as well as conferences held in Nairobi, New Delhi, and Mexico.

Program Activity, 1958-1979 (bulk)

Separated Materials:

Separated Materials

Specific appropriations have been removed from the folders as this information can be found within the dockets in the Board of Trustees Records. Moreover, information about various PRIs has also been removed and was originally found in the Closed Grant File Room at Ford Foundation (see Appendix E).

Scope and Contents

The General subseries consists of information on planning and evaluation the Foundation's programs. The Program-Related Investments focuses on the progress of the PRI program in its first years, and the Grants subseries emphasizes Foundation policies on administering grants. The series consists of memoranda, correspondence, reports, financial reviews, and notes.

Arrangement

Series VII, Program Activity, is housed in six archival boxes, and is divided into four subseries: General, Program-Related Investments, Grants, Financial Reviews of Grantees. Items within each folder are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Program Activity The Program Activity series documents general policy for activities related to the Foundation's program areas. The series covers general program strategy, planning and evaluation. It also covers topics in grant administration such as, travel and study awards, payment policy, multi-year renewals, Delegated Authority Projects (DAPs), Foundation-Administered Projects (FAPs), and expenditure responsibility. The series contains some information on specific grants that the Foundation issued in the form of financial reviews of grantees. The series also documents Program-Related Investments (PRIs), a direct responsibility of Trottenberg's. Beginning in 1968, PRIs began as an experiment in realizing philanthropic goals via capital investment. The PRI subseries documents the beginnings of this experiment, covering some specific information on PRI recipients to self-evaluation of the new program. Topics in this series include the PRI Policy Committee, threshold approvals, fiscal status summaries, and investment summaries. The series also includes two information papers evaluating the PRI program two years and four years after its inception.

Self Study, 1955-1979 (bulk)

Arrangement

Items within each folder are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Series VIII, Self Study, is housed in three archival boxes. The series consists of various task forces and other studies the Foundation conducted on itself. Studies cover topics such as financial accounting, overseas compensation, FAP resource allocation, and telecommunications. The series consists of memoranda, correspondence, reports, questionnaires, newspaper articles, charts, and notes.

Scope and Contents

Self Study The Self Study series contains a number of self studies and task forces that the Foundation conducted in order to learn more about itself and how it runs in order to improve Foundation policies and procedures. There are a few studies on overseas offices (Overseas Development Self Study, Overseas Compensation Study, and Overseas Task Force) that can be used in conjunction with the Overseas series in order to round out the researchers knowledge of the overseas component of the Foundation's administration. There are a number of other studies dealing with the size of the Foundation in terms of assets and expenditures. For instance, Paul Strasburg's paper on the size of Foundation argues breaking the Foundation into smaller divisions, basing his argument on the various effects the action would cause for the public. Trottenberg, ever concerned with the Foundation's need for retrenchment, disagreed with Strasburg's proposal, arguing that decentralizing the Foundation would increase its general management costs. Other studies also deal with the issue of the Foundation's costs, such as the Cost Comparison Study. Some studies deal less directly with how the Foundation is run, and more on how it can expand its program areas. For instance, the Telecommunications Task Force aimed to study the impact of telecommunications, beyond just television, on society, in order to assess how the Foundation could be involved in the field.

Subject Files, 1949-1979 (bulk)

Arrangement

Folders are arranged alphabetically by topic, and items within each folder are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Series IX, Subject Files, is housed in thirteen archival boxes. The series consists of a number of topical subject files. Some of the most significant and widely-covered topics include affirmative action, the agricultural institutes dependent upon Foundation support, the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), retrenchment of Foundation expenses, and the Tax Reform Act of 1969. The series consists of memoranda, correspondence, telegrams, reports, policy papers, speeches/statements, questionnaires, newspaper articles, charts, notes, photographs, and blueprints.

Scope and Contents

Subject Files The Subject Files series contains the topical subject files, documenting many of the activities and issues with which the Foundation was involved during Trottenberg's time. The topics range from work with Magnum Films to create a documentary of the Foundation's current building at the time of its construction in 1967, to work with a number of grantees, such as Yale University and their Pay As You Earn (PAYE) student loans plan. The series also contains information on housing for then-president, McGeorge Bundy, and Board of Trustees member, Julius A. Stratton. The folders associated with this topic (box 46, folders 454-458) are restricted in their accessibility by researchers. Researchers should consult the Foundation's archivist prior to reviewing the material within those folders. Some of the most significant and well-documented topics in the series include organizations dependent on Foundation support (particularly several agricultural institutes), the Tax Reform Act of 1969, and the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, retrenchment of foundation expenses, and affirmative action.

Dependent Organizations: The Ford Foundation gives financial support to many organizations, but some of these receive so much support that they are deemed to be largely, if not wholly, dependent upon the Foundation. This series documents a number of organizations that fall into this category, such as the Institute of International Education (IIE). Relying on the Foundation for general support, IIE is an organization that administers international education and technical assistance programs, and it has worked with many of the Foundation's individual grant projects all over the world. For instance, IIE has worked with several agricultural institutes that are also dependent upon Foundation support. The Foundation helped to establish several agricultural institutes, such as the International Rice Research Institute (IRRI) in the Philippines. IRRI was established in 1960 order to accelerate and improve the development of rice varieties and their production techniques. Other, agricultural research and training centers include International Institute of Tropical Agriculture in Nigeria, Centro Internacional de Agricultura Tropical in Colombia, and Centro Internacional de Mejoramiento de Maiz Y Trigo in Mexico.

Tax Reform Act of 1969: The Tax Reform Act of 1969, signed into law by President Nixon on December 30, 1969, provides an extensive legal framework requiring philanthropic foundations to be more publicly accountable for their work. For the most part, the Foundation considered the new law to be a positive change, but it would still demand that the Foundation adjust their programs and procedures in order to comply with the new regulations. For instance, in an effort to prevent foundations from being misused in such a way that they financially benefit their founders, the Act set requirements such as a minimum payout of six percent of assets or of full next investment income (whichever is higher). Other provisions include a new kind of "expenditure responsibility" over grants, demanding that foundations perform certain monitoring duties that previously had been the responsibility of the Internal Revenue Service, and a four percent excise tax on the net investment income of foundations. The series documents the Foundation's reactions to the Tax Reform Act of 1969 as well as the process through which the Foundation altered its programs and procedures in order to comply with the Act and its related amendments. For basic background information about the legislation's provisions and the Foundation's reactions, the researcher may want to refer to the Ford Foundation Annual Report 1969.

Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974: Another law that affected the Foundation during Trottenberg's time was the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA). With the enactment of ERISA, Congress established a new regulatory framework for employee benefit plans, including more detailed requirements relating to fiduciary responsibility. The series documents the Foundation's process of understanding the Act and putting it to work with its own benefits plans, particularly its retirement and thrift plans.

Retrenchment: One of the major issues with which Trottenberg dealt during his tenure at the Foundation was the retrenchment program. In fact, in a memorandum to the staff announcing Trottenberg's retirement from the Foundation, then-president, Franklin Thomas, paid particular attention to Trottenberg's diligence in dealing with the difficulties stemming from the Foundation's retrenchment period.

The latter half of the 1970s was marked by a period of severe reduction of the Foundation's general management costs and program budgets. Financial reductions first became a necessity in 1967 and 1971 in order to preserve the Foundation's longevity. However, the Foundation's projections at those times were too hopeful, and combined with the bad economies of 1973 and 1974, the Foundation needed to undergo even larger reductions in order to remain a stable institution. Thus, at the December 1974 meeting of the Board of Trustees, a new target for annual spending was set at $100 million, requiring a 50% budget cut. Budget cuts were implemented across all areas of Foundation spending – from a reduced size and decrease in the number of grants to the termination of employees. Trottenberg recommended setting up an appropriation from the Foundation's General Funds to create a Retrenchment Fund. First recommended in 1975 and expected to last as long as 1979, the Retrenchment Fund began as $500,000 set aside by the Foundation to cover costs associated with the retrenchment program. For instance, the IBM Computerized Energy Conservation Power Management System was utilized to conserve energy and in turn, it reduced operating costs of the Foundation's building. Since the system helped to cut costs, its installation was charged to the Retrenchment Fund.

The series documents the retrenchment program from setting up the Retrenchment Fund to how the financial reductions would affect all aspects of the Foundation, such as employees and field offices.

Affirmative Action: As affirmative action for women and minorities became an important social movement in the 1970s, Trottenberg paid particular attention. He emphasized hiring women and minorities as Foundation employees, as well as hiring minority consultants. The concern for affirmative action was such that a subcommittee of the Affirmative Action Committee, chaired by William Gormbley, was created in order to study the possibility of revitalizing the Training Associate Program in an attempt to improve the Foundation's affirmative action program. The affirmative action folders in the Subject Files series include Trottenberg's background research on the affirmative action policies of other institutions, and document creating and abiding by affirmative action policies within the Foundation.

Though the bulk of materials on this subject are found in the Subject Files series, this issue was clearly important to Trottenberg, as his emphasis on it is evident throughout the entire collection. For instance, in the Financial series, a folder on consulting firm Lucas, Tucker, and Company contains a study by Bert Mitchell, and strongly encouraged by Trottenberg, on the presence of black CPAs in the accounting profession. Evidence of Trottenberg's concern for affirmative action is also present in such series as Administration and Operations and Memoranda and Correspondence.

Real Estate, 1966-1979 (bulk)

Scope and Contents

The General subseries contains general information on the Foundation's investments in real estate, as well as information on all real estate investments that fall outside of the U.N.D.C. The U.N.D.C subseries is the stronger of the two in this series. It contains material documenting the development of the U.N. area from the setting up of bylaws for the U.N.D.C. to information on some specific real estate investments such as the Beaux Arts Hotel. The series consists of memoranda, correspondence, reports, press releases, newspaper articles, notes, maps, and blueprints.

Arrangement

Series X, Real Estate, is housed in five archival boxes, and is divided into two subseries: General and United Nations Development Corporation (U.N.D.C.). Items within the folders are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.

Scope and Contents

Real Estate The Real Estate series contains information on the Foundation's investments in real estate, particularly focusing on the United Nations Development Corporation (U.N.D.C.). In fact, the decision by the Board of Trustees to locate the current Foundation building in the vicinity of the United Nations was made with the express idea that the new building could then serve as a catalyst for developing and improving the entire area. Soon after the Foundation's building was built, the Board of Trustees Executive Committee began a real estate investment plan to acquire 28 properties located in a two block "core development area" spanning between 43rd and 45th Streets and 1st and 2nd Avenues. The initial work in setting up this real estate investment plan in the U.N. area predated Trottenberg, but he quickly became involved once his term at the Foundation began. In the May of 1968, just before Trottenberg joined the Foundation, the New York State Legislature passed a law that set the two block core development area aside as the United Nations Development District. The law also created the United Nations Development Corporation to develop the district or to make arrangements with private sponsors to develop it. The Foundation's involvement with and financial support for the U.N.D.C. was motivated by a desire to improve the area of the U.N. in order to serve public interest by demonstrating the possibility to effect dramatic, qualitative changes with a strong social purpose through cooperation of the public and private sectors.

Board of Trustees, 1962-1979 (bulk)

Scope and Contents

Board of Trustees The Board of Trustees series primarily contains information on Board meetings ranging from 1967 to 1979. It also includes the Executive Committee and the Finance Committee meetings from this time. These folders contain materials such as Minutes from the meetings, as well as reports to be discussed at the meetings and press releases announcing decisions solidified at the meetings. Dockets and Treasurer's Reports, however, have been removed from the folders; thus, this series is best used in conjunction with the Board of Trustees, Executive Committee, and Finance Committee Records. In addition to the various meetings, the series contains information on (topics in general folders), as well as correspondence with some of the Board's members, such as Julius A. Stratton, Alexander Heard, and Walter Haas. Particularly interesting is a folder about Henry Ford II's resignation from the Board of Trustees. As the son and grandson of the two Fords that established the Foundation in 1936, Henry II had a personal connection to the Foundation, as well as a respect for the Foundation's work. After 33 years as a trustee, Ford was the longest-standing Board member at the time of his resignation in 1977. Ford served the Foundation from its early, informal beginnings and helped transition it to its more structured state when the Foundation became a national and international philanthropy in 1950. Ford's letter of resignation left the Foundation with some of his criticisms of how things were being run, attracting a host of negative media coverage, some of which is included in the collection.

Scope and Contents

The series consists of memoranda, correspondence, telegrams, reports, policy papers, press releases, newspaper articles, and notes.

Separated Materials:

Separated Materials

Some materials, such as Minutes from the meetings, Dockets, and Financial Reports, have been removed from the collection and can be found within their respective collections (see Appendix D).

Arrangement

Series XI, Board of Trustees, is divided into two subseries: General and Meetings. The General subseries contains assorted information about the Board of Trustees and some of its members, including information on Henry Ford's resignation from the Board. The Meetings subseries is divided by regular Board of Trustees meetings, Executive Committee meetings, and Finance Committee meetings, with meetings arranged chronologically. Items within folders are arranged chronologically, maintaining original order.
