Scope and Contents

In late 1959, The Asia Society moved into its new headquarters at Asia House, 112 East 64th Street, New York City. The second floor of the seven-floor building housed two galleries running the width of the house, one in front and one in back - in future, to be known as Asia House Gallery.

On January 7, 1960, the first exhibition to be held at Asia House, "Masterpieces of Asian Art in American Collections", opened to the public. In the Foreword to the catalogue for this exhibition, John D. Rockefeller 3rd, President of The Asia Society, wrote, "It is a source of great pleasure and satisfaction to all of us associated with The Asia Society to be able to present this important collection of Asian art as the first exhibition in our gallery. The assembling of this striking array of art objects, all of them from American collections, will, we hope, prove of value in further appreciation for the artistic achievements of the East."

The Asia Society Exhibition files document the exhibitions held over the next 15 years. From January 1960 through March 1975, a total of 50 exhibitions took place at Asia House. Most were chosen by guest curators who were experts in their particular field. Pieces were loaned by private collectors, by other museums, and on a few occasions, by the governments of the countries whose objects were being displayed. Many of the exhibitions were circulated to other museums throughout North America. Documents concerning lectures and private openings and events, and newspaper and magazine articles about the exhibitions shed further light on the history of Asia House Gallery during this time period.

This collection, although documenting only a small part of The Asia Society's history, provides visible and artistically beautiful examples of how the Society seeks "to further greater understanding and mutual appreciation between the United States and the peoples of Asia." [Source: Catalogue for "Mingei: Folk Arts of Old Japan, 1965]
