Biographical / Historical

Sheila Biddle worked at the Ford Foundation for more than ten years. From 1982 to 1996, she was a Program Officer in the Foundation's Education and Culture Program. With a focus on higher education, she developed guidelines for the Ford Foundation Fellowship Programs and increased grant support for university African American studies programs.

After leaving the Ford Foundation, Biddle worked as a Senior Research Scholar at Columbia University from 1996 to 2002 and then worked as a consultant on internationalization for different universities and organizations. She earned a Ph.D. in history from Columbia University.
