Biographical / Historical

The Life After the Ford Foundation (LAFF) Society is an independent, volunteer-led association of men and women who have spent some phase of their careers working for the Ford Foundation. The Society was formed in 1991 by former staff members, led by Edward Meade, Jr. and Richard Magat, who wanted to stay in touch with their colleagues as they went on to other assignments or retired. LAFF was the first alumni group for former employees of a philanthropic foundation. From its inception, the expenses of the LAFF Society have been covered by annual dues and voluntary contributions from members.

The membership of LAFF includes those who served with the Foundation either in New York or overseas. In addition, local chapters have been formed in cities where members are geographically concentrated — Boston, New York and Washington in the United States, and overseas in Bangkok, Beijing, Cairo, Jakarta, Manila and New Delhi.
