Scope and Contents

This collection primarily contains transcripts, audiotapes, and notes of interviews conducted by author Cary Reich during research for the first volume, and anticipated second volume, of "The Life of Nelson A. Rockefeller." Additionally, it contains partial audiotaped interviews for Reich's New York Times expose "The Creative Mind: The Innovator," which appeared on April 21, 1985, as well as for other financial articles.

In addition, there are audio interviews conducted by Patricia Linden for a "Town and Country" magazine article ("The Rockefellers' Monumental Legacy," September 1982) describing the Rockefeller legacy in New York, as well as for her own unrealized, unauthorized biography of Nelson Rockefeller.

Lastly, the collection has subject files primarily consisting of research materials and news clippings pertaining to a variety of significant events in Nelson Rockefeller's professional life, including but not limited to the 1964 U.S. presidential campaign, the International Basic Economy Corporation (IBEC), his tenure as Governor of New York, and the U.S. vice presidency.

Oral History Audio, (circa 1980s (Bulk: 1982))

Scope and Contents

This series consists of audiotaped interviews conducted by author Cary Reich for the first volume, and anticipated second volume, of "The Life of Nelson A. Rockefeller." Additionally, there are partial audiotaped interviews for Reich's "New York Times" expose "The Creative Mind: The Innovator," from April 21, 1985, as well as for other financial articles by Reich.

Lastly, the series contains audio interviews conducted by Patricia Linden for a "Town and Country" magazine article ("Rockefellers' Monumental Legacy," September 1982) that highlights the Rockefeller legacy in New York. She was also working on her own unrealized, unauthorized biography of Nelson Rockefeller.
