Abstract:	The files from the Office of Joseph E. Slater, cover the years 1957 to 1967, and consist primarily of reports, correspondence, inter-office memoranda, and notes. The material has been arranged into six series. There was no discernible order within the series; therefore, the processor imposed an artificial order on their arrangement. Material falling into the following categories has been removed and transferred to the appropriate records groups in the Ford Foundation Archives: - Unpublished staff and consultant reports -Speeches by Mr. Slater and other Ford Foundation staff -Office of Reports (OR) publications - Budget papers Listings of the staff and consultant reports, speeches, and OR publications that were removed from the papers are appended to this register. The Archives maintains an index (#39) of budget papers. For additional information regarding Mr. Slater and the International Affairs program, the researcher should consult Slater's oral history.

Joseph E. Slater, Program Officer in Charge of the International Affairs (IA) Program from January 1967 until November 1967, also held the following positions:

11/1961-12/1966 Associate Director, International Affairs Program (IA)

11/1961-7/1962 Study Director, Special Committee to review Ford Foundation's operations and future policies and programs

8/1957-10/1960 Program Associate, International Affairs Program (IA)

During Mr. Slater's tenure at the Foundation, he took several leaves of absence:

1961 Department of State, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Educational and Cultural Affairs

1960-61 Development Loan Fund, Assistant Managing Director

1958-59 The President's Committee to Study the United States Military Assistance Program, Executive Secretary

Before joining the Foundation in 1957, Mr. Slater was Chief Economist at the Creole Petroleum Corporation (Standard Oil Co., N.J.) in Caracas, Venezuela; and Executive Director of the Creole Foundation, also in Caracas. Prior to his work in Venezuela, Mr. Slater held various posts in the United States Government, both in the U.S and abroad.

Mr. Slater was born in Salt Lake City, Utah on August 17, 1922. He graduated with honors from the University of California at Berkeley in 1943 with an A.B. degree in Economics.

Mr. Slater resigned from the Foundation in November 1967. From 1967 to 1972 he was President of the Salk Institute, La Jolla, California; and from 1969 to 1986, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies. In 1986, he assumed the post of Chairman of the John J. McCloy International Center in New York City.

Segment One: International Activities of the Ford Foundation: An Overview

The Foundation's aspiration to become a national and international philanthropy for the advancement of human welfare was first formally expressed in the seminal 1949 report of the Gaither Study Committee, Report of the Study for the Ford Foundation on Policy and Program (RAC Library, call letters 361.7 GAI ), which was commissioned by the Board of Trustees to chart the Foundation's future. Foundation Trustees launched Ford's international grantmaking activities in 1950 when they approved the committee's report and its embrace of peace, democracy, and freedom. Since then, the Foundation has tackled these goals using a variety of strategies and responding to changing contexts, from the Cold War to the 1989 fall of the Berlin Wall and beyond.

Toward the Foundation's aspirational goal, "the establishment of peace", its international activities have comprised a wide range of conceptual approaches and focus areas. These include international affairs, international studies, international understanding, arms control and disarmament, international law, international economic concerns, and overseas development in nearly every region of the world. Three distinct periods emerge for the international grantmaking defined by external contextual changes and internal changes in Foundation leadership and structures: the expansion era of 1950-1965; the transition and restructuring years of 1966-1988; and the post-1989 shift away from Cold War dichotomies. During each of the distinct historical periods the consistent objectives were: 1) to ensure freedom and democracy in developed countries; 2) to foster education and international understanding in all countries; and 3) to contribute to the social, economic, and political development of less developed countries.

Segment 2. Period Sketch - The Expansion Era 1950-1965

The Ford Foundation's expansion era (1950-1965) began when the Gaither Study Committee Report placed "peace" as the area of top priority for the Foundation and set the Ford Foundation on a global course. Board Chair Henry Ford II writing in the 1951 Annual Report of the Foundation, identified "the danger of war" as the "the prime threat to human welfare today." Under the leadership of the three Ford Foundation presidents in this period-- Paul Hoffman, H. Rowan Gaither and Henry Heald--and several key trustees, notably the two seriatim chairs, John J. McCloy and Julius A. Stratton, the Foundation programs were largely informed by the post-World War II desire to avoid nuclear war and promote greater understanding among the world's peoples, strengthening of the United Nations, and enhancing both private and public American participation in world affairs. The strong board presence of university presidents and former leaders of postwar reconstruction efforts in Europe also helped to inform Ford's approach to building the field of peace and international security in the United States and encouraged extensive overseas activities.

For example, the first three presidents of the expanded Foundation ranged from government and business leadership experience to academic and nonprofit: Paul Hoffman (at Ford, 1950-1953) ran the Marshall Plan in Europe; H. Rowan Gaither Staffer (1948-1953), President (1953-1956) and Trustee (1956-1958) had MIT and Rand experience; Henry Heald, former president, Illinois Institute of Technology and New York University, President (1956-1966). The trustees also ran the leadership gamut from government and nonprofits to academic: Trustee John J. McCloy (from 1953; chair, 1959-1965) was assistant Secretary of War during World War II and chairman of the Council on Foreign Relations; and Trustee Julius A. Stratton (Trustee from 1955; chair, 1966-1970) was president of MIT.

When Ford became an international foundation in 1950, it had a small staff and operated through separate funds. The expansive period in the 1950s and 1960s resulted in a large number of field offices, which increased Ford's global footprint. Support focused on a mix of US university-based programs for research and training; think-tanks for policy-oriented meetings and policy research; and action projects specifically in less developed countries. The Foundation's focus on peace, freedom, and democracy played out against the Cold War backdrop for scientific and military competition between the United States, the Soviet Union and China.

Under President Hoffman, the Foundation's work was organized by the areas identified in the Gaither Committee Report: Area One, the Establishment of Peace; Area Two, The Strengthening of Democracy; Area Three, The Strengthening of the Economy; Area Four, Education in a Democratic Society; and Area Five, Individual Behavior and Human Relations.

Program differentiation began in the Gaither era. When he began in 1953, he introduced the following programs, with international work under nearly all of them: International Programs, Public Affairs Programs, Program in Economic Development and Administration [mainly U.S. based], Education Program, The TV-Radio Workshop, and Behavioral Sciences Program. In 1954, the Foundation gave prominence to the international work explicitly through changing the program names and separating international affairs and overseas development. The 1954 program names were: The Advancement of Education, Education for Democracy, Increasing Knowledge of Foreign Areas, Economic Development and Administration, the Behavioral Sciences, and Overseas Development. In 1955, Increasing Knowledge of Foreign Areas became Increasing International Understanding. In 1956, the last year of the Gaither presidency, the program roster read: Education in the United States, The Behavioral Sciences, Public Affairs, Hospital Aid (only in the U.S.), Economic Development and Administration, International Understanding, and Overseas Development. Names changed but the program focus often remained the same.

President Heald maintained the areas of international interest of Hoffman and Gaither. The International Affairs program housed the programs based in the United States, Europe and Japan, with a few activities linking American and developing countries institutions. The Overseas Training and Research Program took over the efforts to increase American understanding of international issues. From 1957-1959, an International Legal Studies program, run from New York, helped build law programs in developing countries. Starting in 1959, the Overseas Development program comprised all the regional and country offices. In fiscal year 1964, Heald convinced the trustees to add a new focus on population, with grants both in the United States and overseas.

Segment 2. Period Summary - The Expansion Era 1950-1965

With the ever-increasing budget and trustee willingness to invade capital, presidents Hoffman, Gaither and Heald oversaw vast growth in the Foundation's international activities in the United States, other developed countries and developing countries. Activities crossed disciplines, institutions, and national boundaries, although few crossed intra-foundation boundaries. Under the three presidents, Foundation staff in various domestic and international offices from New York interacted with the regional and country offices headed by representatives. Usually in this period, however, these offices in fact worked more closely with local governments than with New York staff, reinforcing the commitment to locally led social and economic development in less-developed countries.

The shared values of this early period reflected as much the continuing competition between the Communist and capitalist worlds as the concerns about maintaining peace. The Cold War provided the contextual continuity for grantmaking on the core themes of increasing American understanding of the rest of the world, building and strengthening connections not only with European and Asian democracies but also with Eastern European countries, the Soviet Union, China, and Cuba.

Segment 3. Period Sketch - Transition and Restructuring 1966-1988

In the 1960s, the Ford Foundation Trustees began to rethink the role of the Foundation in the context of the era's dramatic political and cultural changes. For instance, the passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Act created a domestic policy context in which the Foundation could more deeply engage with issues of rights and social justice. Events overseas starting in the late 1960s would extend the rights agenda to international affairs and development operations at the Foundation -- all advanced by the leadership of McGeorge Bundy (president, 1966-1979).

McGeorge Bundy was appointed president in 1966, following a significant career in national security and academic administration. During World War II, he worked with the Army's intelligence division, and in the early post-war years was a political analyst at the Council on Foreign Relations. Even without a postgraduate degree, at the age of thirty-four he became dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science at Harvard University. In 1961, President Kennedy appointed Bundy to be Special Assistant to the President for National Security - a position he held for five years under both Kennedy and Johnson. Those significant years saw the Bay of Pigs invasion, the Cuban Missile Crisis, and the beginnings of the Vietnam War.

When Bundy arrived at the Foundation, he initiated a restructuring that modeled government departments rather than the academic ones President Henry Heald had established in the 1950s. At the same time, he had to contend with serious financial constraints due to Ford's overspending in the prior periods and to economic downturns in the global economy. The Board of Trustees mandated an annual spending of over $100 million.

These economic constraints meant that Foundation programs had to be more selective across the range of its programs. Nonetheless, international activities remained prominent with the new president and trustees. President Bundy and key trustees such as Eugene Black (1960-1968, former head of the World Bank) and Robert S. McNamara (1968-1986, former U.S. Secretary of Defense and then head of the World Bank, 1968-1981) reflected a commitment to the international activities. Bundy also added to the board in 1972 the first trustee from a developing country, the Indonesian activist and scholar, Dr. Soedjakmoto, the former Ambassador to the United States from his country and then Special Adviser on Social and Cultural Affairs to the Chairman of Indonesia's National Development Planning Agency.

To create economies of scale, Bundy unified US-based international and overseas activities under one division: the International Division (using the name for the first time). That division comprised Resources for Development (area studies, languages, and exchanges), Population, International Relations, Planning and Evaluation, and the country programs. David Bell, an economist and the first administrator of the US Agency for International Development (1962-1966), was named vice president and served in that capacity until the end of Bundy presidency.

In 1966, Bundy terminated the long-standing internationally oriented but domestically based International Training and Research Program. Several large domestic programs -- including support of centers of international studies - were phased out in the 1970s. Instead, Ford launched under its international affairs efforts a focused but robust program in security and arms control. Over Bundy's tenure, the overseas offices were reduced from twenty in 1966 to twelve in 1979, when he retired.

The Foundation increasingly turned its attention to different set of international issues including human rights and working in repressive societies, such as South Africa. The military coups in Latin America during the late 1960s and early 1970s led the Foundation to initiate in 1976 a human rights program housed in Vice President Bell's office.

In 1979, Franklin Thomas was named president of the Ford Foundation (1979-1996). In contrast to Bundy's international and defense policy background, Franklin Thomas brought to the Ford Foundation his experience in law, housing, and community development. Prior to joining the Foundation, Thomas, a lawyer, was a Foundation trustee. He chaired the Rockefeller Foundation-funded Study Commission on U.S. Policy towards South Africa and led the Ford-funded Bedford-Stuyvesant Restoration Corporation in New York from its beginning in 1966 until he left in 1979. Earlier, he had been deputy police commissioner of NYC.

In the first decade of Thomas' tenure, the international work was still framed using the post-war East-West dichotomy. Several trustees brought to the board active engagement in international issues: Donald F. McHenry (trustee over the period 1981-1993) had served as ambassador to the U.N. and was active in the anti-apartheid movement; and General Olusegun Obasanjo (trustee over the period 1987-1999) had been Nigerian head of state from 1976-1979, and was then president of the African leadership Forum. Along with McNamara and Soedjakmoto, Rodrigo Botero, an internationally renowned economist from Colombia and former Colombian Minister of Finance and Credit from 1974 to 1976, remained on the board over the period 1978-1989.

During the early years of the Thomas presidency, the scope and strategies of the Foundation's activities were also influenced by economic and global pressures, leading to reduced assets and further financial stringencies. Thomas' board-mandated reductions resulted, for example, the firing of twenty senior staff at the same time. To achieve more effective and efficient programs, Thomas had a vision of Ford as one foundation, linking the domestic and overseas activities under new program themes: Urban Poverty, Rural Poverty and Resources, Human Rights and Social Justice, Governance and Public Policy, Education and Culture, and International Affairs.

The restructured Foundation comprised two programmatic divisions led by vice presidents: U.S. and International Affairs Programs (USIAP) headed by Susan Berresford; and Developing Countries Program (DCP), headed by William Carmichael. Berresford had been at the Foundation since 1970, coming from the U.S. Manpower Career Development Agency. She served in the National Affairs area, first as program assistant and then program officer (1972-1980), becoming head of women's programs in 1980. The main international efforts under USIAP were housed in Rural Poverty and Resources, Human Rights and Governance, and International Affairs. The other programs - Urban Poverty, Education and Culture, and Program-Related Investments - also addressed a scattering of international issues related to their main themes.

Carmichael had joined the Foundation in 1968 as Representative in Brazil. In July 1971, he was named Head of the Office of Latin America and the Caribbean, and in September of 1977, he became Head of the Middle East and Africa Office. The DCP program was responsible for all the Field Offices: Andean and the Southern Cone, Brazil, Mexico and Central America, Bangladesh, India, Southeast Asia, West Africa, Eastern and Southern Africa, and Middle East and North Africa.

When the Foundation initiated a Human Rights and Governance program (HR&G) in 1981, it was the first instance of a Ford program explicitly entitled "human rights," despite the fact that human rights grantmaking that had started officially in 1976. International Affairs remained separate from HR&G. In 1987, however, the Board conceptually linked three programs, creating a Trustee committee called Human Rights, Governance, and International Affairs, which existed until 1992. Operationally, however, the programs relating to these fields did not often work together.

International governance remained a commitment under Thomas. The Foundation, for example, had a long-established relationship with the United Nations: from 1951 until 1988, the United Nations received ninety grants from the Foundation (it received another 198 over the period 1989-2009).

In these early years of the Thomas presidency, dramatic changes were occurring in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. Under President Mikhail Gorbachev's leadership since 1985, the USSR was opening up to the international community, the rule of law in society was taking prominence there, and press freedoms were spreading. The foundation developed new programs in the region, drawing on the $60 million already spent to promote human rights and free expression and increase Western understanding of developments there.

Given the continuing economic constraints facing the Foundation and rising debt in developing countries, the Foundation shifted support under DCP to smaller scale community-based initiatives in the field offices. Thomas was also charged by the Board to increase the diversity of grantees, especially to favor populations "most affected" by the problems of concern to the Ford Foundation. The Foundation built on earlier efforts and sharpened its focus on women's issues throughout the world, including shifting the focus of the population program to women's reproductive health and child survival.

In the 1980s, Carmichael and others, with strong support from Thomas and the board, continued the 1970s' support of South African grantees for training large numbers of black lawyers and litigating sensitive cases in the South African legal system. Recognizing the multifaceted nature of discrimination in South Africa, the Foundation not only advanced the rule of law, but also strengthened civic organizations, women's groups, and educational institutions. Further, it supported a number of activist organizations in the United States that were energetically advocating US governmental sanctions against South Africa and for private disinvestment. The Foundation also played a role in shaping US policy on apartheid through the role Thomas played from 1985 to 1987 chairing the US Secretary of State's Advisory Committee on South Africa.

The Foundation's overseas staff also sought to improve the economic situation in poor, marginalized communities through targeted loan programs particularly to women head of households, beginning with the innovative work in Bangladesh of Professor Mohammed Yunus, the founder of the Grameen Bank. The results led the way to establish the field of microfinance with the aim of empowering women living in poverty conditions, such as through a microfinance network in Latin America starting 1980 and a global lending program for women starting in 1987.

Thomas encouraged staff to share results at worldwide meetings. During those meetings, Ford staff in the country offices and in New York tried to follow the mandate to work as "one foundation." The persistent challenge toward meeting that goal, however, was that initiatives emerging from the New York-based programs, or indeed any program developed in one country, were not always adaptable, relevant or acceptable in other countries or regions. It remained a challenge to develop a unified program, despite the commitment at the highest level of foundation leadership.

Segment 3. Period Summary - Transition and Restructuring 1966-1988

During this era, the Foundation's earlier interest in business and the economy evolved into a commitment to improving conditions for people living on the margins of society. The Ford Foundation promoted advancements in women's rights around the globe and introduced micro-lending into grantmaking. At the same time, the economic issues that were shaping program strategies also affected the Foundation's assets. Severe cuts resulted in a significant restructuring of country programs and reduced budgets across all programs.

Even with the cuts in country offices, in the 1970s Ford grantees in developing countries received approximately 80% of the International Division budget. The remaining fifth went to Population, Development Studies, and International Affairs. Although representing a much smaller piece, the International Security and Arms Control program from 1973 was the Foundation's most concerted effort to make meaningful inroads in disarmament and nuclear issues - those challenges most directly linked to the Foundation's historic concern for peace. By 1979, the Ford Foundation was the biggest funder of arms control as a field, both in the U.S. and overseas.

Scope and Contents

The office files of Joseph E. Slater span the years 1957 to 1967. During this time, Mr. Slater held various positions in the International Affairs (IA) program, ultimately becoming Program Officer in Charge. The files are comprised of many types of documents totaling 21.5 linear feet: reports, drafts, background papers, strategy papers, requests for grant action, correspondence, memoranda, minutes, and notes. This material stems from Slater's involvement in a wide range of activities within and outside the Foundation: conferences, committees, program reviews, meetings, world-wide travel, and day-to-day Foundation activity. The files are particularly strong with regard to the following topics:

Atlantic partnership; European community; Economic development; Relationship between developed and developing countries; East-West relations; Asia and the Pacific; International organizations; International communications; Science and technology; World affairs education

In 1962, Slater served as Study Director of the Special Committee appointed by the Board of Trustees, and its Chairman, John J. McCloy. This committee issued a report, "Directives and Terms of Reference for the 1960's". The working papers of the Committee, drafts of its report, and four volumes of supporting material, which are arranged in a separate collection, are complemented by material in Slater's files.

"Directives and Terms of Reference for the 1960's" reviewed the Foundation's program activities from 1950 to 1961, and recommended a revised set of policies and programs for the decade ahead. The four regions of concern to the IA program were: the United States, the Atlantic community, the Pacific, and the international community. Overall, the goals were twofold: to solidify political, economic, and social foundations within each region, and to develop mediums for the coordination and cooperation of their policies in the international arena. An overriding objective was to reduce global tensions.

The bulk of Slater's files document the actions taken by the IA program as a result of the recommendations made in the Committee's Report. The contents of Slater's files may be enhanced if viewed in connection with the report, its supporting material, and with the working files of the Committee. Slater's files which predate the Report's publication (1957-1961), are largely devoted to U.S. foreign economic policy, and Atlantic and European affairs. To this end, they are integral to the later material.

In the early 1960s, the building of an Atlantic partnership was a Foundation priority. The main objective of the partnership was to strengthen and unify the European Community to the point where it could be an equal partner to the United States. Another basic principle was the establishment of links between the developed countries of the "free world" and the developing countries.

The files demonstrate IA's interest in meeting the goals of the Atlantic partnership. They document the support given to European initiatives in economic development and integration, higher education, and to the encouragement of relationships between Western Europe and the developing countries.

The files which cover Europe and the Atlantic partnership are not restricted to an individual series. Slater's trips abroad, inter-Foundation activity, and external conferences and organizations all have a bearing on this topic. Of particular significance is the material related to the following individuals, organizations, and subjects:

Individuals

Dowling, Walter; Gordey, Michel; Huntley, James H.; Kohnstamm, Max; Moore, Ben T.; Neuman, Robert; Schaetzel, J. Robert

Organizations

Atlantic Institute (1); European Productivity Agency

Subjects

Business and management education; Economic development and integration; European travel; Economic and social development of Latin America; Young Leaders project (2)

A cohesive Atlantic community was also important to the East- West relationship. The files contain a variety of documentation with regard to this topic. In the late 1950s, IA began to stimulate international cultural activities as a means of expanding East-West contacts. Slater's notes of his trip to the Soviet Union in 1964 indicate the Foundation's concern for East-West issues. A letter from Zbigniew Brzezinski (March 23, 1967) reports on the mood in Europe toward East-West issues, and makes recommendations to the Foundation for programs in this area.

For a more detailed account of the topics having to do with Europe, the Atlantic, and the East-West relationship, consult the individual folder listings, located elsewhere in this register.

In 1958, Slater organized an informal group of businessmen, academicians, and former government officials from outside the Foundation to study foreign economic policy, particularly the role of private enterprise in its implementation. The files of the "Foreign Economic Policy Project" include correspondence, reports, memoranda, agenda material, and minutes. Subsequently, Henry Heald (then President of the Foundation) appointed an ad hoc committee (Shepard Stone, Neil Chamberlain, and John Howard) to examine, on behalf of Foundation interests, the issue of economic cooperation in the foreign arena. Material from Slater's study group was used by this committee. (3)

During Slater's tenure, IA expanded to include the developed countries of the Pacific, particularly Japan; and to a lesser degree Australia. IA activities were designed to bring Japanese institutions into the mainstream of western democratic activity, namely that of the Atlantic partnership. The material generated by Herbert Passin, Foundation consultant on Japan throughout the 1960s, documents the Foundation's activities in Japan during that decade. Also included are a few pieces on the Foundation's involvement in Korea during that time.

Although Latin America is not traditionally one of IA's regional interests, Slater was involved in certain Latin American projects. His files include material from a Foundation study to establish a "House of the Americas" (Casa de las Americas). This study was a building block in the creation of the Center for Inter-American Relations. (See PA67-285) Included in the files are the project's final proposal by Philip Van Slyck, and commentary on the project by Latin American scholars.

Slater worked as a consultant to the late Senator Jacob Javits in the establishment of ADELA - the Atlantic Community Development Group for Latin America (P A63-218). Its goal was to encourage multilateral private investment in Latin America. A long-term goal was the establishment of a Latin American Common Market. Slater's correspondence with Javits regarding Latin American economic integration is included in the files. Former President of Colombia, Alberto Lleras Camargo, was also involved in this project.

From March 13 to 17, 1963, Slater attended a seminar sponsored by the Council on Religion and International Affairs entitled, "Intervention and the American Purpose: Cuba 1962". Top government officials who had been involved in the Cuban Missile Crisis were among those who participated in the discussions. The file from this conference includes Slater's handwritten notes of sessions with Paul Nitze, then Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs; Roger Hilsman, then Director of Intelligence and Research Department of State; and Harlan Cleveland, then Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs. The file also includes a copy of a memorandum from Slater to Stone in which Slater conveys some of the discussion's conclusions with regard to the impact of the crisis on the Atlantic alliance.

In 1962, the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) received an IA grant (P A62-365), for studies concerning the development of the Atlantic partnership and the challenge presented by Communist China. CFR, in turn, established two projects - The United States and China in World Affairs and Atlantic Policy Studies. These projects were comprised of steering committees and smaller study and discussion groups. Slater's files contain many of the working and background papers used by these committees and study groups, and supplement the material in the grant file, which is on microfilm. As a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, Slater also participated in CFR studies which examined the relationship between science and international relations. These files include material produced by two discussion groups, Science and the National Interest and Science and Foreign Policy.

(Slater's files also document IA's interest in exploring the role of science in world affairs, particularly the impact of scientific development on international relations. These files include drafts of reports by Foundation staff and consultants, inter-office memoranda, and correspondence from individuals in the field.)

During Slater's tenure, the IA program was concerned with strengthening the United Nations. The files include preparatory material for a study done by Lawrence Finklestein on this subject. Some Foundation grants to the Brookings Institution were designated for work in this area. The files contain material on two Brookings' projects: (1) the United Nations Policy Studies Program, a committee on which Slater served, and (2) the strengthening of the United Nations' specialized agencies, notably the U.N.'s Institute for Training and Research.

The Foundation's interest in the field of international communications prompted it to participate in the creation of the International Broadcast Institute (1966-1967). The files contain Slater's correspondence with those closely involved with this project - Louis Cowan, David Webster and Sig Mickelson. There is also correspondence documenting international support and recommendations for the establishment of the institute from individuals associated with the media, as well as from professionals in other fields. The group includes Michel Gordey (Le Monde, France), Aurelio Peccei (Olivetti, Italy), Robert McDonald (Vice President, Foreign Policy Association), George Probst, (Chairman, Broadcasting Foundation of America), William Benton and Maurice Mitchell (Publisher and Chairman, and President, Encyclopedia Britannica). Finally, there are numerous internal and external reports which chronicle the development of the institute.

The IA program supported the study of arms control. The files include correspondence relating to a consultants' report by Eric Stevenson and John Teeple, "Research in Arms Control and Disarmament, 1960-1963". Memoranda and correspondence relating to Ernest Lefever's consultancy work in this field are also included.

There is material that demonstrates the Foundation's interest in the caliber of the United States' public service. Of particular interest, is an 8-page letter from Slater to John McCloy (January 1960), on the importance of strong public leadership. The letter contains possible ways to improve the public service career system.

Citizen Education in World Affairs was an IA study to improve adult knowledge of, and participation in world affairs. The memoranda of James Huntley (staff) and Calvin Nichols (consultant) contain information on the Foundation's support of World Affairs Councils throughout the United States, and of other IA activity to promote world affairs education.

Material from the Foundation's 1962 study, Personnel for Overseas Development, is included. This study examined the qualifications of personnel from the developed world, working in developing countries. Both private and public sector organizations were considered.

The files contain material from IA program reviews that took place in 1966 and 1967. They include strategy papers and memoranda regarding many of the topics already mentioned, for example, the Atlantic community, international economic cooperation, relationships between developed and developing countries, rising young leaders, the United Nations, and international scientific cooperation. Two draft reports, "International Order, International Institutions and the United Nations" and "The United Nations, International Institutions and International Order", contain commentary by Henry Kissinger, then at the Center for International Affairs, Harvard University; and Robert Manning, Editor, The Atlantic Monthly.

The "review" files also contain individual country reports. These include several papers on the People's Republic of China. They demonstrate the Foundation's interest in opening lines of communication with Mainland China. One means was to stimulate contemporary Chinese studies in the United States and abroad. In a memorandum (Nov 8, 1966) to Slater, Kenneth T. Young (the Asia Society) suggested a "Program for Contemporary Chinese Affairs" for the years 1970-1995.

Finally, in addition to the extensive memoranda of James Huntley and Herbert Passin, Slater's files also include grantee-status memoranda by Charles McVicker (IA consultant, 1966-1967) documenting a range of IA interests; and some European trip notes of Stanley Gordon, Richard Catalano, Waldemar

Nielson, and Shepard Stone, colleagues in the IA program. Mr. Stone was Director of IA from 1955 to 1965. Stone and Slater collaborated on many projects, and shared a close professional relationship. In addition to his trip notes, Slater's files also contain some of Stone's correspondence and memoranda.(4)

NOTES:

(1) The Atlantic Institute should not be confused with the Atlantic Foundation. The creation of a Foundation never came to fruition. However, the material generated by its proposals are located in these files.

(2) The Young Leaders project was a talent scout system to build a community of potential leaders who embraced the European- Atlantic concept.

(3) Slater's committee was also referred to as the Private Initiative for International Economic Cooperation for Growth and Freedom. The goal of the ad-hoc committee as stated by Heald, was a United States and free world program of economic cooperation for growth and freedom.

(4) See Ford Foundation reports #002804, "Citizen Education in World Affairs: 1) The Foreign Policy Association 2) The World Affairs Councils" and #002581, "Report of Committee on Citizen Education in World Affairs", for more information on this topic.

CHRONOLOGICAL FILES, 1957-1967

Arrangement

CHRONOLOGICAL FILES and the material within each file, are arranged in reverse chronological order. The folder titles are also listed in reverse chronological order.

Scope and Contents

SERIES I, CHRONOLOGICAL FILES (1957-1967), consists of 7.5 linear feet of Slater's outgoing correspondence to persons outside the Foundation and to Foundation staff, his memoranda to the files, as well as copies and drafts of requests for grant action (RGAs). CHRONOLOGICAL FILES are a comprehensive documentation of Slater's activities while at the Foundation. The files covering the months September 1960 to August 1957 also contain some of Slater's incoming correspondence. Additional correspondence between Slater and many of the individuals in the latter group may be found in other series. CHRONOLOGICAL FILES also contain two folders of memoranda documenting Slater's May-June 1959 trip to Europe. These files are best used in conjunction with the additional memoranda in the corresponding TRIP NOTES (Series VI) file. There are no chronological files for the November 1961 to November 1960 period, during which time Slater was on a leave of absence.

GEOGRAPHIC FILES, 1957-1967

Scope and Contents

SERIES II, GEOGRAPHIC FILES (1957-1967), consists of 2.25 linear feet of correspondence, memoranda, notes, and drafts of reports. GEOGRAPHIC FILES are divided into three subseries: ASIA PACIFIC, EUROPE/ATLANTIC and LATIN AMERICA. Within each sub series the material is further divided into the following sections: countries, individuals, organizations, and topics. The organizations which are filed in each section are entered by name in the ORGANIZATION FILES (Series IV) folder listings with the appropriate cross reference to Series II. Other cross references are indicated in the folder listings. The GEOGRAPHIC FILES are best used in conjunction with the TRIP NOTES (Series VI).

Arrangement

GEOGRAPHIC FILES are comprised of three subseries: ASIA/PACIFIC, EUROPE/ATLANTIC, and LATIN AMERICA. They are arranged in alphabetical order. Within each subseries the sections are arranged in alphabetical order. The material within each folder is arranged in reverse chronological order.

MEETING FILES, 1958-1967

Arrangement

MEETING FILES are arranged in alphabetical order by title of the meeting, sponsor of the meeting, the place of the meeting, and meeting dates.

The material within each folder is arranged in reverse chronological order.

Scope and Contents

SERIES III, MEETING FILES (1958-1967), consists of 3 linear feet of correspondence, memoranda, notes, agendas, minutes, and background and meeting papers. This series includes all meetings except those of the Council on Foreign Relations and the International Broadcast Institute which are included in Series IV, ORGANIZATION FILES. Series II is made up of many different types of meetings: conferences, committees, seminars, colloquiums, formal and informal study groups, and briefings. Some were sponsored by the Ford Foundation and held internally, others resulted from Foundation grants and were held under the auspices of the grantees, while others matched Foundation interests and were attended by Mr. Slater in his capacity of staff member of the International Affairs program.

SUBJECT FILES, 1957-1967

Arrangement

SUBJECT FILES are arranged in alphabetical order. Subject files containing diverse material are arranged alphabetically by section. Office of International Affairs contains six sections, two of which - IA Program Review and OIR Self Study - are arranged in reverse chronological order.

The material within each folder is arranged in reverse chronological order.

Scope and Contents

SERIES V, SUBJECT FILES (1957-1967), consists of 3.75 linear feet of reports, drafts, correspondence, memoranda, and notes. Reports, drafts, internal Foundation memoranda, and individual IA dockets (requests for grant action that were submitted to the Trustees for approval) which relate to program and budget planning of the IA program, are included in the subject files, Office of International Affairs. This subject also includes miscellaneous correspondence between Slater and individuals within and outside the Foundation. The miscellaneous correspondence is arranged alphabetically by individual or by his/her affiliated organization. Office of International Affairs also contains some memoranda of Richard Catalano (staff) and Charles McVicker (consultant). Office of International Affairs: miscellaneous notes, includes a memorandum (20 Mar 1961) by Waldemar Nielson on various IA program activities.

TRIP NOTES, 1957-1967*Arrangement

TRIP NOTES are arranged in reverse chronological order by the inclusive dates of each trip. Within each trip, the places visited are arranged in alphabetical order. Within each folder, the material is arranged in reverse chronological order.

The trip notes of Richard Catalano, Stanley Gordon, Waldemar Nielson, and Shepard Stone are arranged in alphabetical order at the end of the series. The material within each folder is arranged in reverse chronological order.

Scope and Contents

SERIES VI, TRIP NOTES (1957-1967), consists of 1.25 linear feet of itineraries, correspondence, memoranda and notes. This material should be used in conjunction with Series II, GEOGRAPHIC FILES. The material from Slater's earlier (1958 and 1959) trips to Europe are the most extensively documented. The trip notes of Richard Catalano, Stanley Gordon, Waldemar Nielson, and Shepard Stone are filed separately at the end of the series.
