Biographical / Historical

George Zeidenstein, born July 29th 1929, started his undergraduate education at the University of Pittsburgh in 1947 and transferred to the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor in 1948. Zeidenstein later attended and graduated from Harvard Law School.

Zeidenstein began his professional career as a corporate and securities lawyer on Wall Street. However, after ten years he left Wall Street to work in support of voter registration drives for African-Americans in Mississippi and Arkansas in the 1960s.

In 1976, Zeidenstein was hired by John D. Rockefeller, 3rd as president of the Population Council (at the time, Rockefeller was chairman of the organization); Zeidenstein worked at the Population Council for seventeen years. Zeidenstein currently works as a Distinguished Fellow at Harvard University's Center for Population and Development Studies, where he began in 1993.

In between his time at the Population Council and Harvard University, Zeidenstein worked in international development issues with the Ford Foundation and the Peace Corps. His work with the Peace Corps relocated Zeidenstein and his family to Nepal, where Zeidenstein was Country Director, and Bangladesh, as Representative of the Ford Foundation. For his work, Zeidenstein has been decorated by the governments of Senegal and Finland. Zeidenstein is also a former Board Member of the International Center for Research on Women.

In 2001 George Zeidenstein's memoirs, Lifelines, was published by Modern Memoirs Publishing of Amherst, MA.
